NEW QUESTION: 1

All of your subsidiaries can share the same ledger with their parent company and all reside on the same application instance. They do perform intercompany accounting.

What does Oracle consider the best practice approach to performing consolidations?

- A. Use General Ledger's Balance Transfer programs to transfer subsidiary ledger balances to the parent ledger, and then enter eliminating entries as a separate balancing segment in the parent ledger.
- B. Use Oracle Hyperion Financial Management for this type of complex consolidation.
- C. Create separate ledgers for each subsidiary that shares the same chart of accounts, calendar, currency, and accounting method. Create a separate elimination ledger to enter intercompany eliminations. Then create a ledger set across all ledgers and report on the ledger set.
- D. Use General Ledger's Financial Reporting functionality to produce consolidated reports by balancing segment where each report represents a different subsidiary. Any eliminating entries can be entered in yet another separate balancing segment.

Answer: B

NEW QUESTION: 2

A company that provides wireless services needs a solution to store and analyze log files about user activities. Currently, log files are delivered daily to Amazon Linux on Amazon EC2 instance. A batch script is run once a day to aggregate data used for analysis by a third-party tool. The data pushed to the third-party tool is used to generate a visualization for end users. The batch script is cumbersome to maintain, and it takes several hours to deliver the ever-increasing data volumes to the third-party tool. The company wants to lower costs, and is open to considering a new tool that minimizes development effort and lowers administrative overhead. The company wants to build a more agile solution that can store and perform the analysis in near-real time, with minimal overhead. The solution needs to be cost effective and scalable to meet the company's end-user base growth.

Which solution meets the company's requirements?

A. Develop a Python script to failure the data from Amazon EC2 in real time and store the data in Amazon S3. Use a copy command to copy data from Amazon S3 to Amazon Redshift. Connect a business intelligence tool running on Amazon EC2 to Amazon Redshift and create the visualizations.

B. Use an in-memory caching application running on an Amazon EBS-optimized EC2 instance to capture the log data in near real-time. Install an Amazon ES cluster on the same EC2 instance to store the log files as they are delivered to Amazon EC2 in near real-time. Install a Kibana plugin to create the visualizations.

C. Use an Amazon Kinesis agent running on an EC2 instance to collect and send the data to an Amazon Kinesis Data Firehose delivery stream. The Kinesis Data Firehose delivery stream will deliver the data to Amazon S3. Use an AWS Lambda function to deliver the data from Amazon S3 to Amazon ES. Use Kibana to visualize the data.

D. Use an Amazon Kinesis agent running on an EC2 instance in an Auto Scaling group to collect and send the data to an Amazon Kinesis Data Forehose delivery stream. The Kinesis Data Firehose delivery stream will deliver the data directly to Amazon ES. Use Kibana to visualize the data.

Answer: D

A: Not real time.

C: Not sure if in-memory caching will help in terms of logs and not DB? Anyway installing ES cluster on the same EC2 instance means the ES is not managed and will increase overhead.

D: ES already has direct integration with Firehose, there is no need to transfer to S3 first unless it needs to retain the data for long period of time for analysis
