NEW QUESTION: 1

What is the purpose of probe rules file caching (e.g. the CacheRulesFile property)?

- A. It provides a system for selecting which events to cache so that they can be processed by the probe at a later time (i.e. when a target ObjectServer is less busy).
- B. It specifies a rules file for processing events previously cached by the probe and are being replayed. This allows different rules to be applied to cached and non-cached events.
- C. It provides a system for storing a probe's last known working rules file and using it in the case when the probe is restarted with an unavailable or invalid local rules file.
- D. It causes the probe to cache its current rules file into memory so that a running probe is not automatically affected by subsequent changes to the rules file(s) on disk.
