NEW QUESTION: 3

How does stub routing affect transit routes in EIGRP?

- A. Transit routes are filtered from stub networks to the network hub.
- B. It prevents the hub router from advertising networks learned from the spokes.
- C. It is designed to prevent the distribution of external routes.
- D. Transit routes are passed from a stub network to a hub network.

Answer: A

Explanation:

Explanation

Default configuration of EIGRP stub only advertise directly connected and summery routes but it does not advertise learned routes. So if a stud router is being used as a transit path - then traffic will drop.

Example from the ARCH book:

Router RTR-X receives the 10.1.1.0/24 route from router RTR-Y, but it does not adver-tise it to router RTR-A because stub routers do not advertise learned routes. Network 10.1.1.0/24 is now not reachable from the hub, even though one of the redundat connec-tions between the hub and the spoke is alive. A similar problem occurs in the opposite direction. Router RTR-X is a stub, so it does not advertise the summary route of the core network (10.0.0.0/16) to router RTR-Y. As a result, router RTR-Y has no connectivity with the other hub; therefore, RTR-Y will be isolated, and it can only reach RTR-X subnets. And go through the topic called " Inappropriate Transit Traffic"
