NEW QUESTION: 3

An end user using C series codec wants to change the participant layout for a meeting hosted on a Cisco TelePresence Server. What are three valid layout options available in codec web interface? (Choose three.)

A. equal

B. single screen

C. loudest speaker

D. custom

E. rolling

F. overlay

Answer: A,B,F

Explanation:

Explanation/Reference:

Explanation:

Overlay layouts show the active speaker or content and up to nine overlaid continuous presence panes (per screen) showing other recently active speakers. These are called Active Presence layouts on the TelePresence Server.

Single screen layouts only show the active speaker or content. On multi-screen endpoints, other recent speakers will show on the additional screens.

Prominent layouts show the active speaker or content and up to four of the most recent loudest speakers.

This is the default layout used if the endpoint chooses to show content in main video. This layout is not available on multiscreen endpoints.

Equal layouts show a grid of up to 4,9, or 16 of the most recent active speakers in equal panes, depending on the number and type of endpoints in the conference. Multi-screen endpoints are displayed together in a horizontal group and maybe centered if the grid is wider than the number of screens in the endpoint. This layout is not available on multi-screen endpoints
