NEW QUESTION: 1

Two managers have been informed that their units will be relocated to a new site. The units are to share space at the new office location. The managers have been arguing for several weeks over the allocation of space and the location of offices. This disagreement is threatening the relocation schedule and disrupting other projects. The managers' supervisor has now become involved in the conflict and must try to minimize the potential for hurt feelings while resolving the problem quickly. Identify the supervisor's best approach for this situation.

- A. Remind the managers that the company needs their cooperation in this effort so that costs can be reduced
- B. Tell the managers not to worry and that problems like this have a way of working themselves out.
- C. Design a floor plan and tell the managers who occupies what space.
- D. Sit down with the managers and determine a solution.

Answer: D

Explanation:

Problem solving is a means of confronting the conflict and removing its causes. The emphasis is on facts and solutions, not personalities and assignment of blame. The disadvantage is that problem solving takes time. In this situation, a three-party negotiation stressing a win-win attitude is appropriate. Negotiation should be feasible because the parties have overlapping interests.
